Out (of) The Wazoo

Janine (J9) Weber, Grand Wazoo

Welcome Foam Rangers to the 2017 brewing year! The Foam Rangers is a club that celebrates homebrewed beer and we learn about beer styles by sampling many commercial beer examples too. As an obsessed homebrewer for over 12 years now, I want to re-ignite the brewing passion in our club because it seems many of us have become distracted by all the new breweries and commercial beers in town. There is NOTHING like drinking and sharing the results of your own creativity. No commercial beer will give you the same sense of accomplishment and pleasure that a well-made homebrew does. So what's holding you back? Get out there and BREW!

As your Wazoo (Wazina), I encourage all members new and old, beginners and experienced, all-grain and extract to brew yer butts off this year. Bring your brews to the meetings to get feedback. Then enter them in competitions. We've gotten trounced by the Zealots too often in the last few years. I challenge the Foam Rangers to re-take the Lone Star Circuit trophy and once again stand on the top of the spent-grain pile of Texas homebrewers!

Grab a buddy and brew. If you are planning a brew at your house, turn it into a casual brew-in by posting an announcement on the Facebook page as well as on the email list (cuz a bunch of us Luddites refuse to use Facebook) so that new brewers can watch, learn and help out. Heck, you could probably talk them into cleaning the kettle for you!

Make a Brew Team. With your brewing buddies you'll discover you are making a lot more beer. Team brewing is great because one guy will make the starter, another gets the water ready, another grabs the ingredients and it's just easier and more fun. Also, everyone learns new tricks when they brew side-by-side with someone else.

Brew mead, cider and Historical beers. These categories often have low numbers of entries, so your chances of placing are higher – if your beverage is good. If you are still learning the fine points of making a perfect cider or mead or historical beer, then you'll be getting good feedback.

Enter competitions. Enter as an individual to have a chance to win medals, steins and prestige. Enter both as a team and as an individual to increase your point-making opportunities.

Get creative. What I've learned in recent years is that unless you have a hopelessly screwed up beer, you can often fix it. Blend it with another beer. Add flavoring. Add a bit of lactic acid. Increase carbonation. You can re-open a keg and mess around with your beer (just remember to purge the oxygen before closing it up again). You can even pull all the caps off a bottled batch, pour it into a fermenter and dump some fresh yeast starter on it to get it to finish out properly. What I'm saying is: Don't give up! Never give up if there is still a chance to save the beer. There is no better learning experience than fixing up a boring beer.

This year I intend to increase the teaching/learning aspect of the meetings with short "sidebar" gatherings where a more experienced brewer can give a demonstration of a technique or a presentation about ingredients. If you have an idea about something you want to share or present, let me know in advance and we'll make it happen. As always, you can't get feedback about your brewing if you don't bring your beer/mead/cider.

To end this rant.... Love DeFalco's. Buy your stuff from DeFalco's. Be nice to DeFalcoids. Scott and his minions are always there for us and without DeFalco's we probably wouldn't exist.

Brew on, my brewing buddies! J9 Weber, 2017 Grand Wazoo of the Foam Rangers

Foam Ranger Officer Meeting Minutes

January 8, 2017 (due to the First Sunday being New Years Day)

Mike Reed, Scrivener
Ginger Man Pub 2:00 pm3:00 pm

First Meeting of the new officers including a very green Scrivener

Robert Brown (Was Waz 2016)

Mike Reed (Scrivener)

In attendance:
Jnine Webber (Waz), Denise Whitney (Purser),
, Phil Verdieck (Secondary), Bev Blackwood II (At large Board Member, alias Phantom, Guru) I'm sure he has many more aliases, Luke Whitney (Brewsletter Urquell Editor), Eric (a great food god)

Waz welcomed New Year, new officers and had discussion around officer roles as well.

Money

- Began discussion around what kind of allowance we have beer for the club meetings. Secondary spent 200 to 250 for January meeting but will reduce it for the next meeting. Secondary will touch base with Paul Porter on last year's spending.

- Waz approved ordering 100 badges
- There was more extensive discussion around job responsibilities for Purser. Phantom commented that the as far as money budgeting there was not much in the way of expenses except for beer. Don't have to budget the whole year, the months to be concerned about are September to November when we have a lot of money coming in and going out
- Need to encourage members to pay dues.

Newsletter

- Limiting the number of issues printed will reduce the cost. The idea to have people browse it during the meeting, but if they want can read it in more detail they can do it online (website, emailed copies or facebook) or by printing it out.
- Need more pictures. A picture is worth a thousand words. Based on experience (smile) Eric vowed to take plenty. Need to link names with faces. Waz suggested having pictures and profiles on paper including what members like to brew and keeping it in a book. At meetings members can match faces to names.
- Phantom volunteered to start a history column.
- Editor to send Brewsletter to Waz for printing
- Waz discussed deadlines for submitting officer's submission to the Brewsletter. Deadlines are up to the Editor who stated no later than Sunday before Club meeting.

Competition

- Some feedback from judges at one completion seemed shallow Phantom stated are required to give good feedback but not required to use BJPC feed form. Waz stated good feedback is essential for improvement.

- People can bring it to the meetings to get feedback before entering it or just wanting an opinion.
- Waz to check on bringing it to Defalco's. Rumor has it that Defalcoids can be bribed with beer. Plus it helps build relationships.
- Another way of getting help and building relationships is though Brew-ins. Come observe or bring your own beer to brew. It's a good ways to get advice.
- There was also discussion about co- brewing; getting people post there brews with the possibility of others helping out. The phrase Brew Guru or Brew Mentors was tossed about (Waz to work out details)

- Need to be more aggressive in entering competition. Need to remind people when competitions are coming up so they can be ready. There was discussion around publishing a schedule of upcoming competitions.

Dixie Cup

- It's never too early to start planning for the Dixie Cup. If you are interested please contact the Waz.

Brewsletter Urquell - January 2017

We need a Concept Coordinator and Head Stewart to start.

- Purser stated getting packets together for each role to help. Need to order ten extra shirts in each major size to give to sponsors

Club Meetings

- Scrounge, Scrounge, Scrounge, Things needed for raffle. Scrounging is off this year. There are a lot of new breweries around.
- Waz has a new T-shirt in the works she will pay for out of her own pocket that we can sell and raffle off. Purser suggested making it in the style of this year's Dixie Cup
- There was discussion about doing a pub crawl to San Antonio. There is a lot of things going on there. We need to hit a few cool places along the way. With a little thought could be an awesome pub crawl. Waz looking for some to work on it. Phantom had a lot of knowledge on how to set it up.

Food

- The Food God rotation worked well.
- Eric volunteered to do the food for this month's meeting.

Stouts

by Phil Verdieck (Secondary)

Good evening.

This month's beer style is both Porter and Stouts. As is commonly known, they both trace their origins to Britain, where their history is intertwined with each other. The first mention of porter and its many varieties beckon back to the early 1700s. The name "stout" as used for a dark beer is believed to have come about because strong porters were marketed under such names as Extra Porter, Double Porter, and Stout Porter. The term Stout Porter would later be shortened to just Stout. This is apparently, quite wrong.

Archaeologists have recently made discoveries that cast serious doubt into the accepted origins of stout. There is now a growing body of knowledge that points to the Romans as the true originators of the style. A recent digsite in Jerusalem has discovered drawings depicting the Romans during their control of the area (Prefecture of Judea). Carbon dating has placed it at around the time of Christ.

In the first picture one can plainly see Roman troops consuming stout as they mock a local citizen. The origin of the mockery is unknown, but what the Romans are imbibing is clearly stout.

It has also been discovered that the Romans did not use cruxifiction as a sole method of execution. Evidence has been uncovered that they also used drowning in stout as well. This was apparently implemented after learning that the natives were fond of fizzy yellow beer and were disgusted with the thought of imbibing hearty dark ale. Depending upon the crime either form of capital punishment was applied. The Romans were well known to be cruel occupiers. Cruel ... but fair.

Last December one of the last of the Dead Sea Scrolls was meticulously pieced back together. It depicts a scene from the siege of Masada. In the detailed artwork one can clearly see the Romans using kegs of stout as a tool of bombardment. Associated text details how they would saturate an area with the liquid, then allow it to ripen. The aroma would then dishearten the enemy and in many cases would cause an ensuing surrender.

I hope you have enjoyed learning more about one of my favorite beer styles. Feel free to pass on this knowledge and astound your friends!

And now for a friendly reminder from our purser...

This Month in Foam Ranger History

Compiled by Bev Blackwood II

Five years ago – January 2012

In The Brewsletter: 2012 is heralded as the end times according to the fabled Mayan calendar. (Apparently someone mis-read the instructions, because here we are five years later... Whether or not 2017 is the harbinger of the end times is beyond the scope of this modest column.) Competition coordinator David Rogers talks about what led him to enter beers in the first place... Seems it was novelty, not the fact he tended to win a lot. Secondary Bev Blackwood talks about why commercial beers at a homebrew meeting are not a sign of weakness and shares a couple of recipes. Grand Wazoo Jaime Robles talks about having brewers filling his barrel, introduces the new officers and bemoans the loss of our cherished Dixie Cup to the rabble from Austin. There are asses galore in the photo section (actual photos of butts, not just the usual collection of qualifying club members) and a recap of the Christmas Party and first officer meeting of the year by Jaim-B (AKA: Jaime Ortiz, the Scrivener)

At The Meeting: The first club meeting at the "new" DeFalco's on Stella Link, the style of the month was Porters and Stouts, served by Secondary Bev Blackwood from the newfangled "beer cart" which kept folks from having to congregate at one spot to enjoy their beer samples. The pristine floor of DeFalco's was blessed by the occasional application of beer, ensuring the good fortune of the club's new base of operations and that we knew where to find the mop.

Other Events: The first brew-in at the "new" DeFalco's was held on a bright sunny Saturday. Everyone enjoyed the outdoor patio behind the shop and Grand Wazoo Jaime Robles had the honor of being the first brewer to use the new space.

Ten years ago – January 2007

In The Brewsletter: Weighing in at an impressive 16 pages, the January Brewsletter was the first "E-mail only" edition. The cover story detailed the opening of the Red Kneck Wazidential library outside the Waz-Waz's hometown of Wharton. Incoming Grand Wazoo, Bob (Titanic Bob, T-Bob for short) Daugherty sets forth his agenda for 2007, which revolves around more people brewing, more people judging, and the Foam Rangers winning the Bluebonnet Brew-Off AND Dixie Cup again. Brewsletter Editor Emil Campos captions the usual array of embarrassing photos comic book style and also talks beer & food pairings. Secondary Scott DeWalt talks porters and stouts, Scrivener Doak Procter fills us in on the Christmas party at Saint Arnold and the occifers meeting at the Richmond Arms. Brad Petit talks new beers being distributed into the Houston market. The Brett Ninja infiltrates a Carboy in John Burrow's cartoon.

At The Meeting: Held at the old DeFalco's on Stella Link, the meeting led off with a trial run of a BJCP sponsored beer doctoring kit. The horror of A-B swill made even less appealing through chemistry was thankfully erased by a wide range of homebrewed and commercial porters and stouts. KGB Czar Ed Moore apparently held many lucky tickets at the raffle, or perhaps had simply bribed the Sly Bastards. Chef Emil brought homemade truffles to pair with the beers and Reena Patel provided a range of tasty eats. Wazoo T-Bob urged everyone to enter the Bluebonnet Brew off and to plan to attend the Backwood Brewers campout in March.

Other Events: None noted.

Fifteen years ago – January 2002

In The Brewsletter: Surprise, surprise! Secondary Kuyler Doyle writes about Porters and Stouts while new Grand Wazoo, Jimmy "play Stairway" Paige is far more sober in his outlining of a new year's club agenda, which includes a host of Brew-ins. Waz-Waz Bev Blackwood is accused of removing all the stairways in the Waz House, much to the consternation of the new Wazoo, who sets about the redecoration by removing the "life-sized replica of Michelangelo's David with Bev Blackwood's head." Somebody was apparently full of themselves! Competition Coordinator Bev Blackwood advocates the destruction of Dallas (admit it, nobody would miss it...) and increased participation of the Foam Rangers in MCAB competitions. Drunk Ra makes predictions for the year ahead, many of which proved to be true, although I'm sure Emma Birdwell is grateful she wasn't named Condoleeza.

At The Meeting: The hated practice of serving beer from behind the counter at the old DeFalco's

FR Dues To Increase To Build Wazidential Library

By T-bob Daugherty

Less than a week after his term expired as Grand Wazoo, Rob Kolacny broke ground for the future Wazidential library at Wharton County Junior College. The three foot long shelf will be the complete repository of the Red Kneck's 365 glorious days as Wazoo of the Foam Rangers. All documents, photos, and artifacts of Wazoo, Secondary Bermenter and Dixie Cup Coordinator will be preserved for posterity. In addition a special building will protect from the elements his BUV (Brewing Utility Vehicle) and his garage. The cost of the building will be covered by increasing Foam Ranger dues to a modest $10,000 per year ($15,000 for family).

Rookie Brewsletter Editor Emil Campos came up with the idea. He elaborated on (Continued on Page 9)

Bob Daugherty

Me as Grand Wazoo? Is this some kind of Shakespearian tragedy or comedy or even some kind of sci-fi story? All I can say is that I never would have imagined it all yesterday morning. I was in the moo's a pleas; I attended my first Dixie Cup. There I was introduced to harleyvine (Old Foghorn...Bigfoot came later) and, after having too much of it, Bev "Skirtboy"

Blackwood. I actually brought a book (on the "Chunnel") to it to read because I did not think I would have anything in common with what had to be "beer geeks". I could not have been more wrong! I now consider the folks I have met not just "beer friends" but close friends. Much of my life is now built around get togethers with you folks. I am grateful for all of you. The club has brought me many happy memories (and many more which I WISH I could remember). I thank you guys for the trusting me to wear the Fee this year. Now what do I plan to try to accomplish during my Wazoo ship?

My first goal is to get more of our new members brewing and semi-retired members brewing again. We have some great was established. May it never be done again. Many stouts and porters were consumed, Wazoo Jimmy and Purser Ron made members pay their f*cking dues.

Other Events: In addition to the regular monthly club brew-in by Joe Lindsey at DeFalco's on the 12th, there were open invitations to brew-ins at Joe Lindsey's on January 6th and 23rd, Jim Youngmeyer's on January 12th and Bill Widger's on the 20th. What a great idea!

Twenty years ago – January 1997 (Thanks Sean!)

In The Brewsletter: Mr. Mike Gans wrote a letter to the BU editor regarding a story published in the Southwest Brewing News and stating how he was "inflamed" and complaining about being asked by someone "down there known as the Stupid Toad" asking him if his beer sucked and stating that it was requirement for Foam Ranger membership. David Odom (Brewsletter Editor?) replied, disagreeing with Mr. Gans' statement that "It seems that the Foam Rangers don't give a shit". Steve Moore called for involvement in a "Foam Improvement" special interest group to start meeting at his house to work out the kinks in their brewing. A whole page of the BU was devoted to listing the beers either on tap at the 8 brewpubs and available from St. Arnolds.

At The Meeting: The meeting was held at St. Arnold brewery on Saturday, the 25th. Somehow Steve Moore was elected Grand Wazoo, Steve Capo was elected Secondary Fermenter, Andy Thomas became Scrivener and Tom Witanek became Purser. The beer of the month was Barleywine, with a sample of a test batch provided by Mr. Brock Wagner.

Other Events: The Foam Rangers web site was updated by "Duke of URL" Beto Zuniga. The Foam Improvement meeting was held on the 1st of Febrewary, so no other events were noted.

Twenty Five years ago – January 1992 (Thanks Sean!)

In The Brewsletter: The January Brewsletter was a total mess, with strange page numbering and other oddities. Someone contributed label artwork, "Brother Swaggart's Cruisin' Cream Ale (I Don't Like to Drink it, I just Like to Watch)". A strange numbered "Beer in Review" article wound through the BU listing the answers to questions posed earlier in the year, "3. What's the worst beer you've had this year?" with responses like "Chris Todd's Lactic Disaster" and "Dead Cat Alley Lager from L.A."

At The Meeting: Was held at Local's bar at 3016 White Oak Dr. in the Heights. Elections were held—and Lou Carranante was re-elected as Grand Wazoo, Sean Markham and Tom Witanek became co-Secondaries, Dave Diehl was elected Scrivener. Dean Doba's IPA was voted to go to the AHA "Hale to Ale" Club competition.

January Meeting Friday, January 18 8 P.M.

By Scoop Moore
HOUSTON — On December 6, at the Homebrewers' Christmas Party, Jimmy Page was inaugurated as Grand Wazoo of the Foam Rangers. Paige recited the Oath of Wazooiness in a soft-spoken ceremony presided over by Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. This marked the end of a controversial election cycle, which, to some, cast doubts on the legitimacy of the Foam Rangers' annual presidential process. In a speech following the inauguration Paige called for solidarity and more St. Arnold Christmas Ale. Scalia was last seen heading to the Gingerman with the Sly Bastards.

Earlier in December, the Paiges

on election night, Florida was initially counted for Mr. Paige's opponent by CNN, but the news network quickly reversed itself. With the election a statistical dead heat, the Foam Rangers and various news and citizens groups scrutinized the election procedures. One group in Palm Beach sued the Foam Rangers, claiming that the "Butterfly Ballot" had befuddled the more inebriated voters, leading to an inaccurate tally. All of this was particularly galling to the public because Paige ran unopposed and there are no Foam Rangers members in Florida.

On election night, Florida was initially counted for Mr. Paige's opponent by CNN, but the news network quickly reversed itself.

began the arduous task of moving into the Wazoo House. This was made more difficult because mischievous staffers from the departing Blackwood administration had rearranged all the stairways from the building. Nevertheless the new Wazoo and family have settled in and Mrs. Paige has begun putting her unique stamp on the historic residence. Sources close to the First Wazoo Lady have indicated that she intends to remove the life-sized replica of Michael Jackson's "Thriller" mask off Wood's head on it and remodel the room that reproduces Elvis Presley's "Jungle Room" from Graceland.

Out Of The Wazoo

By Jimmy Paige, Grand Wazoo

As you now read this newsletter you are not mistaken. It is the Brewsletter Urquell and not the Onion Press. I want to thank Sean Lamb and Steve Moore for taking over the newsletter duties and giving Dave Cato a much deserved break. It will be very interesting year seeing what those two rogues will think up next. If you happen to invite them you may find them talking about one of their feature articles. I would not be surprised to see myself distorted in some way already by their bizarre Bigfoot induced journalism.

I hope everyone had a safe and hangover free Christmas and New Year. We had a wonderful Christmas party at St. Arnold's on December 9th. Many thanks to Brock Wagner for his continued support of the Houston homebrew community. Please pick up a six pack of Saint Arnold beer especially the month's style. Stout. You will not only make Brock happy but those Sir Baudro too, whatever their names are this week, Chuck, Michael Fitzpatrick, or Harry whutamatocali. Despite what Steve Moore says, I am a homebrewer and not a guitarist playing alongside Robert, Jim, Paul, and Borizo. Yes I am a Yankee from Portland, Maine via the Coast Guard, but I got to Texas as soon as I could. I look forward to being Grand Wazoo this year, though I am not a fan of the game. I am hard to shake. I always feel the urge to check out every Spec's liquor store I may drive by. I guess I always be in search of that elusive beer. I leave the grant work to Kuyler and Kari Doyle our new Secondary couple. I know they have already harvested some beer treasures in their cross country travels to share with everyone at future meetings.

I guess as Wazoo I am supposed to have these grandiose ideas for the homebrew club show and move. I do not pretend to have all the answers and I welcome input from everyone, after all it is our club. There is nothing better than a bunch of homebrewers as two brains are better than one "most of the time". Exceptions to this rule are after pub crawls and our Belgian beer tasting in March. I welcome your comments via email or phone and I especially want to talk with you and drink your homebrews at our meetings.

My goals, which I hope you share, are simple. First, continue to educate new as well as seasoned homebrewers through meetings, newsletters, brew-ins and any other way possible. Participation is important and will get more from the club if you

Thirty years ago – January 1987

In The Brewsletter: A combined December / January Brewsletter finds the club mourning the loss of the Grand Wazoo as Andy Bradley moved to Bryan -College Station, land of the club's archrivals, the Malthoppers. Thus left more rudderless than usual, the Brewsletter suggested that maybe there should be some club By-laws or something to ensure an orderly transfer of power. Dr. Strangebrew gives a lesson in yeast culturing that's as useful today as the day it was written.

At The Meeting: Elections were held, and a previously unknown Grand Wazoo was elected. Jacques Lord became the most powerful man in homebrewing after the absent Brad Kraus' significant other made it known he had no interest in serving, should he be elected. Scott Birdwell became Secondary Fermenter, Buck Wyckhoff was Head Bozo In Charge of Special Events and Norm Malone was Purser/ Scrivener. Dues were raised to a whopping $10.00 for students and $12.00 for the rest of us. A couple of potential club activities were floated, including an outing to the Astros and chartering a bus to attend the Southeast Homebrewers Conference and Competition in New Orleans. Porter was the style of the month, and a whopping five examples were offered up for sampling. As "Are You Drinkin' With Me Jesus" hadn't been written yet, the evening ended with club members singing Frank Zappa tunes with the newly elected Grand Wazoo.
